CITY AND SECTION RICHER IN MUSIC

GREAT MINNEAPOLIS ORCHESTRA AN UNUSUAL FEAST.

ONLY $150 DEFICIT DESPITE BAD WEATHER

Burlington Junction, Hopkins, Pickering, Grant City and Tarkio Gave Best Support.

From an artistic point of view, everyone conceeds that Maryville and Northwest Missouri are immeasurably richer. From a financial standpoint, the local management faces a deficit of about $150. In spite of bad and threatening weather, the total receipts were $1,247.50.

In the county, Burlington Junction, Hopkins and Pickering were the largest supporters of the Spring Music Festival. Tarkio and Grant City sent good delegations last night, notwithstanding the clouds and muddy roads. So Maryville men will stand ready after this week's showing to back such a cultural advantage every spring.

Since $800 was guaranteed to cover any deficiency and the deficit was $150, it will be necessary for each person down on the paper to pay about one-fifth of their pledge. The largest amounts pledged are $50 and their payment will be a little more than $10 But enough of the financial side of the great two days.

"Music is seen at its best and highest in a symphony orchestra," said a local musician before the concerts. "Nothing approaches it in its fullness, color, and completeness of harmony unless it be a large pipe organ which is really a large mechanical orchestra."

Most of Maryville heard for the first time probably the playing of compositions as the creator intended they should be played, that is by a full orchestration. The wonderful possibilities of volume, intensity, subdued passages etc., were displayed by Emil Oberhoffer and his great orchestra. Truly the middle west is indebted to Minneapolis for such an organization in its midst.

The fifth number of the afternoon program was perhaps the best example of the contrast in tone shading and spirited playing. From the sad, gloomy "Valse Triste" to the characteristic Morris Dance "Shepherd's Hey" was a step which impressed and delighted even the least musical of the audience.

New Conception of Rhapsody.

And even to those trained in music, a new conception of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2 was given. Wild fervor, rebellious moods, ecstacy and whimsical fantasy followed bewilderingly upon one another. The original harp cadenza by Henry J. Williams was so popular that he gave an encore to the Rhapsody.

Maryville audiences have been given an opportunity this winter to hear a good harpist and a 'cellist who showed the great possibilities of that instrument. They were prepared therefore to enjoy Mr. Williams and Cornelius Van Vliet, famous Dutch 'cellist, yesterday afternoon. Those expecting the very best were not disappointed when Servais' "Fantasy for the 'cello" was given.

The management were unfortunate in Maryville in their singers. Louis Graveure found it necessary to enter a hospital in Omaha. His place on the afternoon program was filled by Miss Leonora Allen who sang a Gounod Aria in addition to her own number. Albert Lindquest suffered a severe affection in his throat after his concert Thursday night and was unable to sing last night.

Wendell Heighton, the manager, showed his desire to do the right thing by Maryville by wiring to Chicago and securing a fine substitute in Burton Thatcher, a young baritone, who filled the place most acceptably. He sang an aira by Verdi and gave "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes," as an encore.

Mr. Oberhoffer, the conductor, was ready at any time to give each artist their due share of the applause and he himself called them back for encores. Richard Czerwonky demonstrated the violinist powers which made him concert master of the great orchestra. His encore was on muted strings with a harp accompaniment.

Great Praise for Symphonies.

Among real music lovers, greatest praise is heard today for the symphonies and symphonic poems which the organization gave. The pizzicato scherzo, third movement of the opening symphony last night, was one of the most popular numbers. The Tannhauser Overture from its familiarity and the Dance of the Nymphs and Satyrs as an expressive and characteristic composition, were also specially liked.

Jean Vincent Cooper delighted the audience last night especially with her singing of the encore, "The Fairy Pipers." Many Maryville people were also most particularly interested in the man sitting in the second trombone's chair.

He was Ralph Kenney, nephew of Mrs. D. C. Wilson, who lived in Maryville for several years at his aunt's home. He has been with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra longer than any other member except the conductor. He played the violin for several years before taking up the trombone.

J. H. Price, 74 years old, died this morning about 10 o'clock at his home, on East Fourth street, soon after he had been brought home after a night of wandering around over the country. His death was caused by exposure and his advanced age.

Mr. Price is said to have been demented and accustomed to wandering around. Yesterday afternoon he left his home and was seen by John Gross last evening about 6 o'clock on his place, southeast of Maryville. He was found alive this morning by the section foreman a half mile south of Arkoe. A part of his clothes had been taken off as if he was intending to retire for the night. Mr. Price was taken to Arkoe depot and brought to Maryville this morning on the freight train. He was taken to his home, and death came soon after.

HALF CENTURY PAST

MR. AND MRS. W. L. JOHNSON'S GOLDEN WEDDING.

MARRIED IN MARYVILLE

"Squire" Has Been J. P. for 25 Years and Has Married 383 Couples.

Is it not a good recommendation for Nodaway county and Maryville that so many of its residents celebrate fiftieth wedding anniversaries? The latest couple to join the ranks of the golden wedding anniversaries are Mr. and Mrs. Warren L. Johnson, who pass the fifty-year mark of married life today. Mr. Johnson is known to his friends as "Lafe."

Mr. Johnson came to Maryville in April, 1865, and the following year married Miss Martha E. Terhune. They went to housekeeping at 334 East Fourth street, and in the fifty years have migrated only one block east and one block north of this place.

Mrs. Johnson is well known here, and when married was one of Nodaway county's most popular girls. She was the daughter of Judge and Mrs. Adam Terhune. Her parents were pioneer settlers in this county.

Mr. Johnson is a man who has led an exciting and busy life from early youth. He enlisted in the army at Mount Pleasant, Ohio, where he was attending school, August 10, 1861, as a private in Company C, of the Thirty-third Infantry of Ohio.

From private he was appointed corporal, September 14, 1861, and on September 25, 1861, he was appointed first sergeant. During the next two years Mr. Johnson took part in several battles, at Piketown, Ky., Ft. Cook, Tenn., Perryville, Ky., Stone River, Tenn., Hoover's Gap, Tenn., MacLamore's Cave, Tenn., and Chickamauga. In the battle of Chickamauga the loss in killed, wounded and missing was 160 out of 343 engaged in battle. At Resaca the regiment sustained the severest loss of its experience. Johnson's division, Fourteenth army corps, lost 137 killed, 501 were wounded and 53 members died in confederate prisons. Mr. Johnson was captured at this time and held prisoner at Camp Sumpter, near Andersonville, Ga.

One of the most valued relics Mr. Johnson has of the war is the picture of this prison camp. Of the interesting things shown in the picture are the bodies of six Union soldiers who were hanged in a row. While in prison he received his appointment as first lieutenant.

Came Here at War's Close.

Following his discharge from the army, when peace was declared, he came to Maryville and has been in active business since, despite his 72 winters or summers he has spent.

He was clerk in the circuit clerk and recorder's office from August 17, 1865, to November, 1866. He was elected county treasurer in November, 1866, and served in that capacity until November, 1868. He also served one year as county attorney. He was deputy clerk eight years under Miles McNeal and has been justice of the peace 24 years and 4 months.

Since being justice of the peace he has performed 383 marriage ceremonies. They are parents of four children—Edgar C., Burlington Junction; John C. Maryville; Mrs. Gertrude Duvall, St. Charles, Mo., and James F., Pueblo, Colo. Two other children, Warren Johnson, Jr., and Mrs. Verna Terhune Bussing, are dead.

There are six grandchildren in the Johnson family, Elmer Ware Johnson, Edgar Ware Johnson, Reginald Ware Johnson, Warren Earl Bussing, Cornelia Hurst and Joyce Elaine Johnson.

There is one great grandchild in the Johnson family, Joseph Johnson.

LANSING PREPARES LARGE DIGEST OF FACTS.

FINAL NOTE TO BERLIN

President Wilson is Giving Important Documents Careful Attention Before Action.

Special to The Democrat-Forum.

Washington, April 15.—Steps were taken today for the final wind-up of the controversy with Germany over the submarine issue. Secretary Lansing spent two hours this morning digesting the evidence dealing with the Sussex and other recent cases.

He prepared a voluminous digest from these documents which he sent to the President. This will be incorporated in the note which it is expected will be sent to Berlin within two days.

Paris, April 15.—Violent bombardment of the French positions on Hill 304, west of Verdun, were resumed and it presages a renewal of infantry assault, says official communication. The Germans kept up artillery in the region of Malancourt and kept up terrific cannonading, the French replying against Bois Arbeaux and Forges.

STONE WOULD QUIT

MISSOURI SENATOR FAVORS MEXICAN WITHDRAWAL.

ALL POSSIBLE DONE NOW

Means Intervention if U. S. Troops Continue, Says Foreign Relations Committeeman.

Special to The Democrat-Forum.

Washington, April 15.—Withdrawal or intervention in Mexico are the only two courses left to the United States, Senator Stone, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, said today after returning from a conference with Secretary Lansing. Stone said he believed the punitive expedition has accomplished all it can.

"How long are we going to keep our army in Mexico?" said Stone. "How long would we allow a foreign country to maintain an army in America? Not very long, I would say. I have never thought, and do not think now, that we would accomplish the real purpose of our nation—the capture of Villa. I have always thought that we would have to withdraw without having captured him.

"The question now is whether we have accomplished all that we can do. I believe we have. Only two ways are left open—withdrawal or intervention. I can see no other way out of it.

"I did not discuss either the Mexican nor the submarine situation with the president today.

"I was resentful yesterday when I read the press accounts of the Carranza note. A demand is one thing and a request another. That looked rather strong to me then, but the note that Secretary Lansing showed me today is merely a request, as I take it, from Carranza for negotiations for withdrawal. Ordering us out would be an entirely different thing. But if we are to continue the policy that we have adhered to for the last four or five years, we should recognize the right of that government, such as it is."

GOT 1-HIT OFF WAKEMAN

BUT NORMAL PITCHER WALKED SIX AND LOST 3-2.

William Jewell Game at Liberty Played in Mud—Tilson Batted at .500 Clip Yesterday.

To pitch a one-hit game according to the official scorer and still lose the game 3-2 was the tough luck of Wilfred Wakeman, Normal pitcher, in the game with William Jewell at Liberty yesterday afternoon. The big pitcher was chiefly responsible for the defeat, however, by walking six men.

The day was dark and cloudy, so "Wake" used his spitter. Lack of control at critical points was costly. Catcher Hickman's slowness at these times added to the trouble. The rest of the Normal team performed well, fielding cleanly. Miller to Tilson to Miller was the one double play of the game.

It was just a case of being outlucked. The Bearcats went after the Cardinals in the first inning and took McKinney to a two-run, three-hit drubbing in the opening session. But that was as far as they got, for Harl took the mound for Jewell in the middle of the second. The two runs should have been enough with Wakeman's pitching, but it wasn't.

Jewell's only hit came in the eighth and won the game, as they had scored in the fourth and sixth innings also. Tilson was Maryville's best batter, getting two hits out of four times up. Maryville's team got five hits during the game. Jake "Eagle Eye" Beckley, old League umpire, gave good satisfaction as arbiter.

PERSHING QUIET FOR OVER 3 DAYS

GOVERNMENT UNEASY FOR SAFETY OF TROOPS.

CARRANZA FORCES ARE MASSING ALONG LINE

President Wilson and Secretary of War Held Midnight Conference Last Night.

Special to The Democrat-Forum.

Washington, April 15.—The government is seriously concerned over the massing of the Carranza troops along General Pershing's line of communication in Mexico. A feeling of unrest has been added to by the failure to get into touch with Pershing for the past three days. Army aviators are now trying to reach Pershing to find out the trouble.

It was admitted that a midnight conference between President Wilson and Secretary of War Baker dealt with reported movements of the Carranza troops. The fact that five thousand troops under General Gomez was moved from Sonora to Chihuahua, where they would be in position to cut off the Americans is declared by army officers to be an unfriendly act.

It is understood that the state department is seeking an explanation of officials.

They admit they fear trouble.

Sends Aviators to Help.

San Antonio, April 15.—Alarmed over the absence of reports from Pershing, General Funston this afternoon ordered an aerial reconnoissance over Parral to learn the exact situation.

American Killed at Parral.

Consul Letcher, at Chihuahua, reported to the state department only one American was killed in the Parral fight. This is the first direct official information received.

Organized Opposition in Chihuahua.

San Antonio, April 15.—An organized opposition is developing in Chihuahua against the American troops. In the absence of official information from Pershing on the Parral fight, General Funston does not know whether one or two fight occurred there. The Mexican reports are conflicting and dispatches sent by Letcher so worded it might refer to a second engagement.

Another Parral Fight Rumored.

El Paso, April 15.—Reports of another fight between Americans and Mexicans near Parral circulated today, but no official confirmation. According to the report some of the Americans were killed.

Mexican Official to Japan.

El Paso, April 15.—General Iturbide passed through here today on his way to Japan on a special mission for Carranza. He refused to say whether his government seeks any alliance with Japan.

Mexicans Are Threatening Lines.

El Paso, April 15.—A message from army aviators sent out to reconnoiter brought the news to Columbus that six thousand Carranzistas from Sonora are assembling along the American line of communication to Chihuahua.

AGAINST GARDNER LAND BILL

Lorain Farmers' Club So Decides—Government Ownership of Railroads Next Subject.

The Lorain Farmers club met last night at the Lorain school and settled the question whether they should vote for the Gardner Land Bank bill and it was decided that the members of the affirmative side, while only two in number, against four that they should not vote for the bill. This goes to show that a woman can out talk three men.

The affirmative was represented by Irvin Fast and Mrs. G. M. Worth, and the negative by Everet Cochran, Clarence Miller, G. M. Worth and J. W. Cochran.

This was by far the most interesting meeting held and a large crowd was present.

The club will meet Thursday night, April 27, and discuss whether the United States Government should own and operate the railroads. The affirmative will be represented by N. R. Staples, Irvin Fast, G. M. Worth, Charles Miller and Mrs. G. M. Worth; the negative will have Clarence Miller, Everet Cochran, Frank Potts, Miles Fast and J. W. Cochran to present the other side of the question.

NEW TORPEDO IS ALMOST HUMAN

YOUNG INVENTOR HAS UNCANNY CONTROL.

TON OF EXPLOSIVES UNDER TOUCH OF KEY

Aeroplane Mile in Clouds Can Drive Missile Unerringly at Battleship.

Congress is about to buy for the United States all rights in the "John Hays Hammond, Jr., destroyer," the inventor of which has devised a torpedo which can be guided by wireless from shore, from a battleship, or from an areoplane, and which will carry a ton of devastating explosive at the rate of twenty-seven miles an hour under water, straight to the heart of a battle ship miles out at sea.

According to the New York Evening World, even people who have seen the wildest imaginings of Jules Verne surpassed in reality, who have accepted the X-ray, the wireless telegraph and the wireless telephone as parts of the world's daily life, might well remain incredulous when told what this young inventor's device is capable of. Nevertheless, here is what its possibilities are, as demonstrated in so many trials that it is no longer an experiment, but an amazing reality:

On or Under Water.

Built either as a torpedo boat or as a torpedo—one for surface work and the other for use under water—it can be steered by wireless in any direction, under absolute control of one man seated with a telescope in one hand and an electric key under the other. This man may be in a station on shore, he may be in a battle ship well out at sea, or he may be hovering out of range of any enemy's fleet in an areoplane.

Its gyroscopically manipulated rudder is so sensitively under the control of the operator that to miss an object as large as a battle ship would be next to impossible.

The transmission of power is of a selective type discovered by the inventor which makes it impossible for an enemy to interfere with it by other wireless waves. If by chance the enemy should discover the wave length which was being used, a different wave length could be substituted while the torpedo was still speeding toward its goal. Not this alone, but if an enemy makes the attempt to interfere with it by wireless, the torpedo, by the exercise of qualities well nigh supernatural, turns at once and makes for the source of the interference waves!

By Day or Night.

It can be operated by day or by night. In the latter case, cleverly shrouded lights indicate the weapon's whereabouts to the man in control of it, without revealing its approach to the enemy.

It carries a searchlight which the man at the wireless key can turn on or off at will.

It may be guided two hundred miles out to sea by a following areoplane and then launched against its target without dimunition of speed at the end of its long trip.

It can carry a ton of the most powerful explosives yet devised by science The usual load of a torpedo is three hundred pounds.

It has been operated and controlled by one man at a distance of twenty-eight miles, or much further than an approaching ship could be seen from shore.

In case the battle ship aimed at should move beyond the radius of control, the torpedo can be "passed along" to another operator in a neighboring station, who then begins directing its movements in the new radius which the enemy's craft has entered.

The fact that in this manner a charge of explosive can be delivered at its target under constant control from its source—a thing never before accomplished—makes the accuracy of the Hammond destroyer greater than the big guns now used in coast defenses.

From Ship or Areoplane.

A man in the conning tower of a battle ship could guide the destroyer. Mr. Hammond has guided his torpedo from an areoplane at a distance of a mile with the ordinary areoplane wireless apparatus now in use. He believes this radius can be extended to five or six miles unquestionably. An additional feature of controlling the torpedo from aloft lies in the fact that an aviator can see objects on the water during foggy weather when they are indiscernible to horizontal vision.

The power for defense contained in a series of these control stations located up and down our coasts might be likened to that of a file of giants facing the sea with their heads among the clouds, ready at any moment to reach out to a distance beyond the range of human eye sight and crush the units of an approaching fleet with the ease of a man flicking an insect off the tablecloth.

A most remarkable young man, this John Hays Hammond, Jr., the product of a new age. His father was famous before him and he had both that handicap and the handicap of wealth, but he has overcome them in a way that bids fair to cast the fame of his father into the shade.

He was born in San Francisco in 1888 and received a cosmopolitan education in the schools of France, England, the Transvaal and the United States. As early as the age of 17 he invented scientific devices of practical value and his trend has always been in that direction.

A Thorough American.

He graduated from Yale in 1910 and has been experimenting with gas engines, wireless apparatus, selenium and its properties, and telautomatics ever since. In trips to Europe he met the greatest inventors of all the countries he visited, and it was his talks with these men which spurred him on to the accomplishment of the marvels here recounted.

He is young, he is exceedingly in earnest, he is alert—incidentally he is good looking—and above all he is a thorough American who loves his native land and wants to see her protected from the horrors he witnessed during his trip to the war zone in Europe. Time may prove that to that end he has done more for his country than any young man in her history.

BETTER ROADS FOR MONTANA

Governor Stewart Makes Plea For Improved Highways.

OLD TRAILS AND NEW.

When the Pleasure Vehicle Came Into Use the Question of Better Roads Appeared as a Small Cloud Upon the Community Horizon—Modern Highways Meet New Conditions.

Time was when any sort of avenue of communication between communities was looked upon as fairly adequate, writes Governor Sam V. Stewart of Montana to the Anaconda Standard. The country was sparsely settled, demands for hurried communication were negligible and methods of transportation were of the crudest. The chief user of the trail, which through courtesy was sometimes dignified by the term "big road," was the freighter, the bullwhacker, who knew that between the beginning and the end of his trip lay a long strip of soil whereon he might expect any variety of weather and encounter soils that were of varying degrees of preparedness for his train. But the fact worried him not at all. He employed the best means at hand and relied upon the almost unlimited power of his humble animals to pull him through.

But the wheels of progress made a revolution or two, and the pleasure vehicle came into use, whereupon the question of better roads appeared as a cloud the size of a man's hand upon the community horizon. The advocate for something better derided the trail that had served the population for a time and began to cry for highways. The difference between a trail and a highway is vast in comfort, in utility and in cost, and the latter item had much to do with keeping the movement back. A hit or miss system was evolved whereby a little work was done at long intervals upon the roads, and then for long periods they were left to take care of themselves. The result was partially satisfactory so long as nature was kind and the weather of a character to make travel pleasant. But at times the elements conspired against the roadmakers, and it was often the case that the driver found as much of his vehicle below the surface as above it.

By and by men began to figure from the economic side of the question, and it was found that in the road that lay between the farmer and his market was to be found the difference between a balance and a deficit when it came to marketing his crop. It required no argument to demonstrate that the man who could make a trip to market in one day where he had formerly occupied two days was making a pronounced saving—was economizing in horseflesh and in farm utensils and winning an extra day that would prove of value to him in his ranch work.

Evolution in machinery building brought us finally to the automobile, the pleasure vehicle and the truck, and the question of improved highways became one of pressing importance. The owner of the pleasure car cried aloud for a better roadway, and the farmer joined in the chorus because it had become possible for him at a moderate outlay to bring himself many hours nearer market, provided the roads were in passable condition. The combination of rural resident and city owner and city business man was irresistible.

To meet the condition thus brought about is now the problem engrossing the attention of city, county and state authorities the country over. Engineers are giving their best thought to the problem of evolving the best method of road building at a minimum expense, and the authorities are striving to give the people what they are calling for in so far as the funds available will permit.

The difference between good roads and the bad variety is the difference between industry and sloth, between pride and carelessness, between the don't care community and the community that will be satisfied with nothing short of the best. The transition from a road of quagmires and ruts is not one that can be wrought in a day or a year, but the county that devotes every possible energy each year to accomplishing the utmost in the way of highways thereby marks itself as progressive and filled with the vision of greater and better things to come from improving the resources at its hand.

One of the greatest benefactors of our time was he who made it possible to transport two tons over our country roads where less than one could be transported before. The inventor and the manufacturer have made it possible for the people to live in far greater comfort, to travel in luxurious ease and to thereby win a competence where such a thing was impossible under old conditions, and the people owe it to themselves to discharge their implied obligations. I believe that, so far as Montana is concerned, they are doing this, and the time is coming, and not far distant at that, when the number of good roads enthusiasts in the state will tally exactly with the number of citizens on the census rolls.

Good Health Doubles the Value of Your Services

A half sick man is not worth half pay. A man or woman in poor health makes a poor leader, a poor sort of a parent.

The value of Peruna in the home can scarcely be estimated. It prevents many of the common ailments. It is an excellent remedy for coughs, colds, catarrh, grip, spring fever, tired-out feeling.

Sit down and think it over. See whether you can afford to go on half sick.

Some people prefer Peruna Tablets to the fluid Peruna.
